Biographical Note

Laura Gilpin (1891–1979) was a photographer, writer, designer, and publisher whose career spanned seven decades. Gilpin first made photographs at the 1904 Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis with a Brownie camera she had received for her birthday. In 1908 she began experimenting with autochromes, an early color process. She studied at the Clarence White School in 1917–18, and her early work is strongly pictorial, reflecting White's influence. Gilpin returned to her native Colorado Springs to establish a publishing company and her own studio for portraiture and architectural work, but left to work for the Boeing Aircraft Corporation during World War II. After the war she settled in Santa Fe, New Mexico, where she supported herself with commercial assignments while working on her personal projects. She published The Pueblos (1941), Temples in Yucatan (1948), and The Rio Grande (1949), contributing both photographs and text. However, The Enduring Navaho (1968) represents her most significant project. Gilpin began photographing the Navajo in the early 1930s and continued throughout her career. By the 1940s she had abandoned the pictorial style, and her photographs of the Southwest and its inhabitants reflect a more straightforward approach. Gilpin left her photographic estate of 27,000 negatives and over 20,000 prints to the Amon Carter Museum of American Art upon her death in 1979. In 1986 the museum organized Laura Gilpin: An Enduring Grace, a major retrospective of Gilpin's work, and published an accompanying catalogue.

Scope and Content Note

The Laura Gilpin Papers spans the years 1907–1979 (bulk 1940s–1970s) and contains correspondence, clippings, journals, address books, scrapbooks, handwritten and typed drafts of her books and articles, exhibition announcements and brochures, samples of papers used in her books, and ephemera. The collection also includes Gilpin's exposure records, notes on printing techniques, and brochures and magazines with illustrated by Gilpin images. Material has been arranged into series: Biographical Material; Correspondence; Business; Technical Material; Exhibitions; Book Projects; Miscellaneous Manuscripts; Clippings; Publications; Journals, Scrapbooks, and Address Books; and Ephemera.

Correspondence: This series includes all forms of correspondence. As much of Gilpin’s correspondence mixes personal and business matters, it has been kept as a discrete group to maintain the continuity of issues discussed. Correspondence is organized by year and arranged by correspondent and then date. An itemized list of correspondence is being prepared; a draft is available upon request.

Business: This series contains all of Gilpin’s financial records, including ledgers, receipts, and invoices. Additionally, all of her advertising materials, used to promote her work, are contained in this series.

Technical Materials: This series contains all of Gilpin’s notes regarding her photographic process. Also included are technical publications on various aspects of photography, sales brochures, and equipment manuals.

Exhibitions: This series contains materials from exhibitions of Gilpin’s work in galleries, salons and museums. Of particular note are public lecture programs illustrated with photographs that Gilpin assembled.

Book projects: This series contains the research and manuscript drafts of Gilpin’s books.

Miscellaneous Manuscripts: This series contains transcripts of Gilpin’s lectures and short format writings for magazines and journals.

Clippings: This series contains clippings from newspapers and magazines regarding Gilpin’s work and issues she was interested in.

Publications: This series contains copies of photography periodicals, many illustrated with Gilpin’s photographs, which she collected as part of her professional career.

Journals, Scrapbooks, and Address Books: This series contains the bound book format materials that document Gilpin’s acquaintances, subjects, and trips.

Ephemera: This series contains mementos and keepsakes, both personal and professional, such as greeting cards from friends and awards for Gilpin’s work.

Realia: This series contains examples of Gilpin’s photographic equipment.

Dates were penciled in on some items, most often on newspaper clippings. Because these items were used in previous research projects, the handwritten date was considered valid and used to arrange the material chronologically.

A more detailed series description appears at the start of each series in this finding aid.
